

obtain conversion through this apostolate, although the great bulk will continue as militant henchmen of Antichrist until the moment arrives for their conversion in mass. Here are the sacred texts which refer to these episodes: "Set up the standard in Sion. Strengthen yourselves, stay not; for I bring evil from the north and great destruction. ... For this gird yourselves with hair-cloth, lament and howl: for the fierce anger of the Lord is not turned away from us" (IV, 6 & 8).

Continuing with this same chapter of Jeremias, the Prophet foretells the imprisonment and death in Jerusalem of Pope Gregory XVII at the hands of the unconverted jews, as also the martyrdom of Elias and Enoch together with a number of cardinals. The whole Church will be deeply troubled. At the same time the followers of Antichrist will gloat and rejoice seeing themselves free of their principal adversary, though but for a short while: "... the heart of the king shall perish, and the heart of the princes..." (IV, 9). The expression 'the heart of the king shall perish' is very meaningful, showing us quite clearly, in the light of our interpretation, the kind of martyrdom Gregory XVII will undergo; for, just as Our Lord Jesus Christ, he will die nailed to a cross and have his heart pierced by a lance.

In the second part of this verse Jeremias describes the amazement and dread of the inhabitants of Jerusalem and of the whole world at the resurrection of the Pope 'De Gloria Olivae', of the Prophets Elias and Enoch, and of the princes who died with him, which will take place on the third day of their death, and they will rise up in the sight of the people. Turning to the Sacred Text we see the apostate priests and the false prophets, who had instigated the killing of the Pope, become terrified: "... and the priests shall be astonished, and the prophets shall be amazed" (IV, 9). This verse of Jeremias is linked to the following text of the Apocalypse (XI, 12): "... And they went up into Heaven in a cloud: and their enemies saw them", which indicates that their risen bodies will enjoy the state of glory, and they will have the beatific vision while continuing their apostolate on earth.

Again Pope Gregory XXVI, accompanied by Elias and Enoch and the Princes of his Church, will war against Antichrist, undertaking the great and decisive struggle, preaching penance with greater intensity, unmasking the Man of Iniquity, and calling on conversion: "Behold, I will send many fishers, saith the Lord, and they shall fish them: and after this I will send them many hunters, and they
